Thank You from Superintendent James Collis Head of Roads Policing.

I have had the pleasure of being in the role of head of roads policing across Sussex and Surrey for just over a year. I regularly hear of the good work and the huge amount of time and effort you all put in to making the roads safer in your communities.

As I drive about the county, I spot many of you out in all weathers. Instinctively I wave and smile as I see you as part of our roads policing family. I am really proud and supportive of the work you do, the time you give as a volunteer makes a huge difference all round, it plays a significant part in reducing speeds where we know there is the potential for killed and serious injury accidents. I can't put a figure on what you have prevented but I can say I firmly believe you make the roads and the communities safer both locally in your areas but given the network and coverage you manage to deliver, also the whole of the county.

We often say from a roads policing perspective that 'we can't be everywhere, but we could be anywhere' but in the case of community speedwatch, it does appear that you can be nearly everywhere!

A heartfelt thank you for all your effort, continued support to keeping the roads safer, and being an active part of the communities in Sussex.

Kind regards

Best wishes

James Collis
